Supporting women in construction

JKC is pleased to support community events and initiatives which share our values. We were proud to partner with the NT branch of the National Association of Women in Construction (NAWIC) in hosting the inaugural 'NT Crystal Vision Awards' on Friday 11 September, recognising the achievements of women in the construction industry.

Almost 1,000 women currently work on the Ichthys Project Onshore LNG Facilities across a wide range of roles including engineers, boilermakers, electricians, and surveyors.

Several women from the Project were recognised on the night, including two nominees from JKC and three winners from Laing O'Rourke.

Stephanie Urlacher, JKC Senior Human Resources Manager, addressed the audience at Parliament House.

"Roles in the construction and resources industries have traditionally been filled by men but times are changing with increased female participation in these sectors. I'm proud to work for a company and on a Project that is reflective of this change," said Stephanie.

"JKC recognises not only the excellent work of the hundreds of women involved in construction at Bladin Point but right throughout the construction industry in the Territory. On behalf of JKC I would like to congratulate all the nominees and winners."
